INTRODUCTION

Research Brief No. 8, devoted to legislation and achievements related to accountability, assessment and testing, is the fourth of a series of short reports on specific subject areas in education for 1972. This series is designed to replace the "big book" format used in previous years, and it is hoped that these smaller booklets will be easier to use and that they will provide the reader with a more definitive approach to his search for information.

In October 1972, questionnaires asking for information on legislation and achievements in education were sent to all state departments of education, legislative service agencies, state thool boards associations and state offices of the National Education Association and the American Federation of Teachers. In most states (15 states either failed to reply or did not submit information on accountability, assessment and testing; 15 states do not hold regular legislative states in "even" years), one or more of the organizations sent a reply. The compilation in this book is based on those replies with supplementation and expansion from information collected by ECS an on-going effort to keep abreast of state education activity.

This report is in no way exhaustive or comparative of individual state activities involving accountability, assessment and testing; it merely presents a picture of the state scenes as reported by those organizations queried and as seen by an ECS staff review of newsletters, bulletins, special reports and legislative summaries on file.

As you go through this book, you will note that the states are identified by the official two-letter postal abbreviations listed on the inside back cover. Under each category, reporting states are listed alphabetically. Legislative citations or identifying words are used after each state abbreviation; statute citations (if reported) are listed as well.

Each description of legislation begins with a capitalized word (ENACTED, FAILED, etc.) which indicates the status of the legislation as of May 1973. Other activity descriptions include the name and address (when available) of a person to contact for additional information. We have listed addresses of state departments of education and legislative reference bureaus in the back of the book, along with addresses of the national offices of the National School Boards Association (NSBA), the NEA and the AFT.

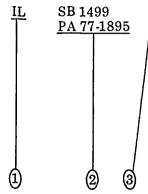

For further information on the legislation-listed in this brief, please write the appropriate state legislative service agency or the state department of education listed in the back of this book.

The state department of education is in the process of developing an evaluation system which further enhances educational accountability. The Accountability System for Student Educational School Services (ASSESS) identifies student variables in terms such as student achievement (STEP scores), student behaviors (absentee rates, suspension rates, dropout rates, VD rates, etc.) and student attitudes (toward learning, services to others, science and technology, etc.). School variables are identified in terms such as expenditures per pupil, class size, teacher educational levels, attitudes of teachers, etc. Community variables obtained by attitudinal scales are identified in terms such as support for education in general, satisfaction with the school a family's child attends, geographical mobility, etc. Multiple regression analysis is being used to determine the effects of school variables and community variables on student variables. Preliminary examination indicates the potential of attitudinal variables (community, teachers and students) is great. Federal support. Contact: Dr. Kellet I. Goals of education are stated as: to make educational matter more meaningful by focusing around career development themes; to provide services for placing every person in the next step in his development; to incorporate greater use of community resources into the educational system; and to increase the educational and occupational options available to all persons.

PA HR 88

ADOPTED. Assessment programs: authorizing the House Committee on Education to hold hearings in the various school districts of the Commonwealth to ascertain the capacity and will of the districts to use state and local moneys efficiently and for appropriate purposes. 1971.*

PA COMMISSION Citizen's Commission on Basic Education—created to conduct a comprehensive survey of basic education in Pennsylvania, including commission hearings; prepare recommendations for improvement of education; report findings of the survey and make recommendations to the governor and general assembly.

PA NOTE:

Statewide assessment of adequacy of educational programs offered by the public schools of the Commonwealth. Schools have been tested yearly since 1970 on their standing on 10 broad-based goals of education. Although the program is mandated, participation thus far has been on a voluntary, first-come, first-served basis. Assessment batteries have been developed to give schools their state standing and relationship to schools operating under a similar set of circumstances. The assessment program is currently available for four different kinds of schools-elementary, middle, junior high and senior high-and includes a longitudinal study., The assessment program is planned to continue until all school districts are served and those wishing re-testing after instituting remedial or innovative programs can be accomodated. Grades, 5, 7, 9 and 11. Federal and state support. Contact: Dr. Thomas E. Kendig, Director, Bureau of Edu ...one? Quality Assessment, State Department of Education.

PA NOTE:

Evaluation of Title I and Title III projects serves two purposes. It furnishes statistical data for assessing the impact of Title I expenditures on educational deprivation in the Commonwealth and is the kind of data required by USOE. There are also educational outcomes achieved through Title I projects which add to the total knowledge and understanding of educational deprivation and how to best deal with it. Evaluation of federal programs consists largely of determining the extent to which the objectives of the projects are realized. This determination is made by the people who conduct the programs and by teams of outside evaluators. The responsibility of the division of evaluation consists of collecting the self-evaluation and organizing teams to make independent judgment of the extent to which the objectives of each project are being achieved. Elementary and secondary levels. Federal support. Contact: (for Title I) Kenneth J. Adams, Bureau of Curriculum Development and Evaluation, State Department of Education; and (for Title III), Miles Miscevich, Bureau of Curriculum Development and Evaluation, State Department of Education.

PA NOTE:

The approval of secondary school programs is an assigned responsibility of the division of evaluation, bureau of curriculum development and evaluation. The authorization for this assignment is derived from the general curriculum regulations of the state board of education. Evaluation is accomplished in two phases: a self-evaluation by the secondary school staff and an on-site visit by an evaluation team. The self-evaluation is designed to involve all the departments of the school. The on-site evaluation is conducted by a team assigned by the state department of education and is concerned with the total school program. For schools meeting or surpassing the standards of approval, a certificate of approval is awarded by the secretary of education. If a school is operating a program which is deficient in certain areas and does not meet the standards for approval, notification of conditional approval is given. Schools receiving conditional approval have the responsibility to make the necessary improvement during the following school year. A program approval certificate will be awarded to schools with conditional approval after a follow-up visit by an evaluation team determines that the school is meeting the standards. Schools that do not show necessary improvements after one year are reported to the commissioner for basic education for his action. Grades 7-12. State support. Contact: Mr. Joseph L. Hojak, Bureau of Curriculum Development and Evaluation, State Department of Education.

PA NOTE:

Elementary faculty self-study is a voluntary decision by a school district. Schools are encouraged to undertake such programs by the department of education through publicity which emphasizes the values inherent in them. Close supervision and direction are essential if their values are to be realized fully. A self-study is a two-year program. It must be preceded by organizational planning and decision making. The extent of planning will vary, but typically will include the following: (1) orientation of administration to self-study procedures; (2) preparation of an administrative plan including budget estimates and time allotments; (3) acceptance of the plan by the staff (teachers) who will be involved; (4) adoption of a supporting resolution by board of school directors; (5) selection anu organization of committees; and (6) procurement of materials. Activity during the first year can be centered most profitably around inservice training of all involved personnel directed toward the development of philosophy and objectives. Application of the evaluative criteria and the preparation of a report are the activities to be performed in the second year. Schools may engage in either the elementary or the secondary self-study, or they may attempt both at the same time. State support. Contact: Dr. Harris Reynolds, Bureau of Curriculum Development and Evaluation, State Department of Education.

SD HCR 511

ADOPTED. Indicates that education is the most important function that government can provide for its citizens. It further indicates that public education is a state responsibility and local districts are responsible to develop programs which best fit the needs and interests of their students and that involvement of our people is the key to the democratic process. Students, teachers, administrators, parents and other community members are being given the opportunity to meet together for the purpose of developing educational goals for the public schools in their communities. Local school districts are encouraged to meet with students, teachers, administrators, parents and other community leaders for the purpose of determining philosophy. goals, program objectives and priorities for their public schools. A board of education of any school district is encouraged to keep and maintain current records, showing the number of certified employee and student hours involved in such meetings and the specific objectives and results of the meeting. Booklet. "A Public Involvement Plan for South Dakota School Districts," has been printed by state department of education.

TN HB 1760 SB 1566 FAILED. Provides for statewide referendum on question of providing equal opportunity for equality education for all children, regardless of race, color or residence, and opposes return to dual system.

TX SR 1446

ADOPTED. Turnkeyed Taft Reading Program—Taft Independent School District contracted with Education Turnkey Systems, Inc. to compare the cost-effectiveness of the Turnkey reading program and the Alpha reading program. The findings indicated that though the cost per pupil of the Turnkey reading program was greater than that of the Alpha reading program, the cost per unit of achievement of the Turnkey reading program was less than that of the Alpha reading program. Grades 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9. Federal support. Contact: Ernest Chambers, Director, Planning Resources, Texas Education Agency.

TX PROJECT

Texas Achievement Appraisal Study—an assessment of approximately 70,000 high school seniors concerning their academic preparedness for success in typical college work related to English, mathematics, social studies and natural sciences; plans and aspirations as to what to do after graduation and evaluation of their high school curriculum and other high school experiences. These statewide data were analyzed by the ethnic and socioeconomic characteristics of the 1971 seniors and reported to the Education Service Centers and participating school districts. In addition, these data were reported on a regional and district basis. Federal support. Contact: Dr. Walter Howard, Director, Division of Program Planning and Needs Assessment, Office of Planning, Texas Education Agency. 1971.*

TX PROJECT

Texas Assessment of Reading and Mathematics—a study of approximately 22,000 sixth grade students who were selected to take a criterion-referenced test in reading and mathematics. Their test scores were analyzed according to the following characteristics: sex, ethnicity, size and type of community, funding source (Title I/non-Title I) educational emphasis in their homes and self-perception in reading and mathematics. Individual and group reports were sent to the participating schools, regional reports to the ESCs, and statewide reports were sent to all ESCs and LEAs which participated in the study. Federal support. Contact: Dr. Walter Howard, Director, Division of Program Planning and Needs Assessment Office of Planning, Texas Education Agency. 1971.*

Data collection instruments for the programs funded through ESEA, Title I, are in the planning stages. These instruments are being designed to collect data which could measure more accurately cost-effectiveness/accountability. Grades K-12. Federal support. Contact: Andrew T. Nutt, Director, Division of Evaluation, Texas Education Agency.

TX NOTE:

In order that the state board of education may achieve its responsibility for evaluating educational programs and to facilitate the attainment of the goals for public school education, recommendations have been made: that funds be provided for the development and testing of planning and evaluation models which will provide validated bases for educational accountability at the local, regional and state levels; and that the state board of education be authorized to develop the policies and procedures for implementing planning and evaluation models.

TX NOTE:

The Elementary School Survey of 1971 is currently being analyzed in conjunction with the 1971 CPIR to produce some estimated cost-effectiveness measures. Grades 2, 4, 6. Federal and state support. Contact: Andrew T. Nutt, Director, Division of Evaluation, Texas Education Agency.

WV NOTE:

Inspired by its involvement in the Mid-Atlantic Interstate Project, the West Virginia State Department of Education developed and is in the process of pilot-testing an accountability model. This accountability model will utilize multiple-regression analysis in conjunction with the state-county testing program in making an assessment of school effectiveness. The model will attempt to identify and determine the effect of school-related and non-school-related variables which affect student achievement. Since all schools do not have the same school-related and non-school-related characteristics affecting them, each school's performance will only be compared to other schools operating under similar conditions. Statewide learner-oriented goals are also being developed utilizing the Delphi technique and the involvement of lay citizens, educators and students. These goals will eventually be incorporated into the aforementioned accountability model and provide the general direction for the total effort. Pilot Study, 6th grade. State and federal support.
